

What will it take to get the FCC to let the State of Indiana alone?

A law has been passed to let me have peace and quiet at night, yet the FCC seems to want to do away with that, and let the telemarketers begin to harass us (in my opinion) with no regard for what we may be interested in. My first thought would be to DEMAND their phone numbers, so I can call them back and waste their time, as they have wasted mine! Also, is there anyway to get the FCC to realise this does nothing for their reputation? Does that matter?
